

Explanatory Notes on Main Statistical Indicators

Legal Entities of Service Industry above Designated Size

Legal Entities of Service Industry with annual business revenue of over 20 million yuan in every district in Tianjin Municipality include three categories: transport, storage and postal services, information transmission, software and information technology services, and management of Water Conservancy, Environment and Public Facilities and one major category: health.

Legal Entities of Service Industry with annual business revenue of over 10 million yuan in every district in Tianjin Municipality include three categories: leasing and business services, scientific research and technical services, and education and four classes: real estate agent services, real estate intermediary services, real estate leasing business, and other real estate.

Legal Entities of Service Industry with annual business revenue of over 5 million yuan in every district in Tianjin Municipality include two categories: households' service, repair and other services, culture, sports and entertainment services and one major category: social work.

Strategic Emerging Industry (Service Industry)

According to The Classification of Strategic Emerging Industry (2018), strategic emerging industry is based on major technological breakthroughs and development needs, promoting long-term development of the economy and society. The industry has the characteristics of intensive knowledge and technology, less consumption of material resources, great potential of growth, and good overall efficiency. The industry includes new generation of information technology industry, high-end equipment manufacturing industry, new material industry, biotechnology industry, new energy auto industry, new energy industry, energy saving and environmental protection industry, digital creative industry, and related service industry.

The statistical coverage of strategic emerging industry (service industry) in this chapter includes legal entities of service industry above designated size.

High-tech Industry (Service Industry)

According to The Classification of High-tech Industry (Service Industry) (2018), high-tech industry (service industry) refers to industry providing service activities for society through high-tech means, including information services, e-commerce services, inspection and testing services, high-tech service industry of special technical services, research, development and design services, science and technology achievements transformation services, intellectual property and relevant legal services, environmental monitoring and treatment services, and other high-tech services.

The statistical coverage of high-tech industry (service industry) in this chapter includes legal entities of service industry above designated size.